Kill a Brand, Keep a Customer

Authors: Nirmalya Kumar

Publisher: Harvard Business Review

Date: 2003

Keywords: Branding, marketing strategy

Managerial Article Abstract:

Companies that have grown through acquisitions over the past two decades now find themselves with large portfolios of brands. Unfortunately, many of the brands do not generate adequate profits or revenues to justify their investments. Brand rationalization is therefore critical to helping firms clean up their portfolios in order to invest and grow the remaining brands.

To order the complete Article please mail to nkumar@london.edu